WORTH-WHILE MAGAZINE

The Rotogravure Magazine Section of the Sunday edition of The New York Times has a permanent worth, both in content and in form. Its contributions have the touch of authority as well as the quality of good writing.

Rotogravure illustrations;
an artistic make-up and wire stitching give it far more than a passing value.
This section is a part of
The New York Times,

KEEPING STEP WITH THE STRIDE OF THE WORLD

Who, do YOU believe, was really responsible for the World War?

In your opinion, are Radicals insane?

What do you know of Germany's changed economic situation?

Can you trace the succession of great political bosses of yesterday and today?

Are you aware of Great Britain's weakness in modern cruisers?

Do you know the present condition of Russia's Red Army? What was the final settlement of the Memel controversy?

What are the facts of the allied betrayal of Syria, and why is that nation opposing French rule?

Have you ever drawn a comparison between the divorce laws of America and Europe?

What is the present status of the new Greek Republic?

Have you read the FULL REPORT of the Reparations Experts?

Do you keep up with the march of science, the newest books, the world financial situation, the acute public emergencies that now exist in so many countries?

THE CURRENT HISTORY ASSOCIATES

CURRENT HISTORY has as Associate Editors thirteen professors of history on the staff of thirteen leading universities. In each issue, each professor records the monthly history of a selected region, the sixty nations of the world being divided among the Board of Editors into twelve sections, with the addition of an International article. This survey requires over 30,000 words (40 pages) in each issue.

THE BLAME FOR THE WAR

By HARRY ELMER BARNES, Ph. D.,

Professor of Historical Sociology, Smith College.

The May issue of CURRENT HISTORY MAGAZINE presents an extraordinary study of the absorbing questions as to the blame for the World War. An analysis of all the important historical works, books and pamphlets published on this subject since 1914 has led Professor Barnes to draw such startling conclusions, so emphatically in conflict with the usually accepted judgment, that his article becomes almost sensational. He acquits Germany as the chief culprit, and places the blame primarily on Austria, Russia and France, in the order named.

Realizing the importance of the question, and the many widely divergent views upon it, the Editor requested Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart of Harvard University to write a second analysis, approaching it from a totally different angle.

These two articles, comprising 15,000 words in all, constitute a most complete, informative presentation of the subject.
